

Among Friends

Training Title:

Co-Workers and Courtship; Navigating Relationships, Sexuality, and Boundaries at Work: Part II Working with Potential Employers

Description:

The confusing and conflict-ridden waters of relationships and sexuality on the job can be overwhelming. Helping someone else navigate these issues can be even more challenging. This training is for employment support professionals who help their clients experiencing intellectual, developmental, and/or neurological diversity in an employment setting to be better prepared to understand workplace relationships and boundaries.

Learning Objectives:

- Promote and normalize discussions of boundaries regarding relationships and sexuality in a work setting
- Identify workplace guidelines, policies, and consequences regarding relationships and sexuality
- Clarify 'unspoken' rules or expectations for interactions with supervisors, co-workers and customers
- Recognize the role trauma plays in most people's reactions to any indication of sexual misconduct - real or perceived
- Advocate for corrective feedback vs. immediate dismissal for minor to moderate, first-time incidents

Primary Audience:

This training is designed for employment support professionals who work with people with intellectual, developmental, or neurological diversity and who need to help them navigate relationships and sexuality in a workplace setting.

Formats Available:

FastTrack
Half Day

Appreciations:

"I learned about how much the need for sexual intimacy, personal intimacy and relationships and how it is present in all of our basic needs as a human."

You can book this training now! Fill out our Training Inquiry Form.

Questions? Contact our Training Coordinator Mel at: mel@among-friends.org